

annual accounts preparation...

Every business, large or small, must produce annual accounts for the tax authorities. All limited companies must also file accounts at Companies House which comply in form and substance with Companies Act provisions.

With legislation becoming ever more complicated, accounts preparation work requires expert handling to ensure that final accounts meet current disclosure rules, and more importantly, provide you with an accurate statement of your profitability and financial net

Annual accounts are a measure of the current financial health of your business and are a powerful tool for management. In the case of many small to medium size enterprises (SME's), the annual accounts are the only piece of verified financial data they receive each year. They also form the basis on which the business' tax position is established.

We can assist you and your business by:

- preparing your annual company accounts

- analysing performance as revealed by the accounts to add value to your business

Our aim is to provide more than just the preparation of annual accounts. We use the annual accounts as a tool to assist in a proactive approach to advising the direction of your organisation. With the help of one of our skilled advisors, your accounts can pin point positive and negative trends in the business. These areas can be focussed on, and by working closely with you, we can help you to add value to ensure that your business' potential is fully realised. During the course of our work, if associated problems are identified (for example VAT, PAYE or National Insurance) we will make you aware of these issues and assist you in resolving them, either from within the department or by referral to other specialists within our practice.

All assignments, such as the preparation of annual accounts, are prepared in a timescale agreed in advance with you and are subject to pre-agreed, fixed fee arrangements.
